The proposition begins with a better consultation

A responsible distributor helps a household make an informed choice—not a medical promise.

01 Review the source water

City, source, TDS, hardness and pre-filtration affect compatibility.

02 Compare the right model

Use household size, daily usage and desired connected features.

03 Set expectations clearly

Published output varies with water quality, temperature, flow and calibration.

Connected care extends the relationship after installation

01 Remote controls

Start, stop and choose supported water modes.

02 Live machine health

Connection, operating state and care alerts.

03 Remote diagnostics

Service teams can review supported telemetry.

04 OTA-ready updates

Supported firmware can be maintained remotely.

Guided setup uses a compatible 2.4 GHz Wi-Fi network. The machine's water function and supported app features should be explained separately.

A clear ownership journey builds trust

The distributor owns the education and follow-up; trained service teams own technical installation and diagnostics.

The distributor role is local, practical and relationship-led

Educate

Explain the product, water compatibility and connected features accurately.

Demonstrate

Arrange consultations and product demonstrations where available.

Convert

Help the household select a model and complete the official buying process.

Follow up

Support app adoption, care reminders and service escalation.

No medical claims • No guaranteed income • Written terms only

Start with capability before scale

Before investing, request the current official agreement, fees, margin/commission schedule, returns policy, territory rules and support commitments in writing.

NEXT STEP

Experience the product. Then evaluate the business.

Book a product consultation, review the Aura range, and request the current official distributor terms before making a decision.
